Lloyd Library Ushers in New Year with Exhibition and Program Series!

Winter Greens: Seasonal Illustrations from the Lloyd Library

When: December 1-March 17
Where: Lloyd Library & Museum
917 Plum Street, Cincinnati

Evergreens are the plants that brighten the short days of a long winter and give us hope that spring will eventually arrive. From pines and yews, to rhododendrons and magnolias, explore the wealth of images from the Lloyd Library collection dating back to the early 1800s.

Winter Greens features early American and European books about forestry and trees, intricate botanical illustrations in bold colors and in detailed line drawings, and engaging stories about the books themselves. Usher in the New Year and prepare for a sense of renewal surrounded by illustrations from the Lloyd Library's rare book collection featuring plants that thrive during the year's coldest months.

Complementing the Winter Greens exhibition, the Lloyd Library and Museum will offer a diverse range of programs of interest to artists, botanists, historians, gardeners, writers, naturalists and outdoor enthusiasts.

Conifers 101: From A to Z to Your Backyard

Enter the Cone Zone!

Saturday, January 27, 1-3 p.m.
Lloyd Library & Museum

Byron Baxter, Central Region President of the American Conifer Society, presents the basics of conifers from towering trees to miniature pines and their use in landscape design and container gardening. This presentation features live specimens, including the “Queen City” variety of ginkgo.
