

Lloyd Library & Museum News

In the Lloyd Library's Strategic Plan, Goal 1 under the pillar Impact is Bring Lloyd Collections to Life, Informing Contemporary Issues. This mandate drives many of our activities. In the coming month, we'll look to the past as a context for understanding the timely issue of medical marijuana. At the same time, we present merging fields of study in the contemporary world stemming from our collections, thanabotany and pharma-ecology.

Radio Interview on Lloyd's Upcoming Exhibit

Lee Hay, host of Around Cincinnati on WVXU, previews the Lloyd's newest exhibition in a conversation with our Executive Director, Patricia Van Skaik. Listen in as they talk about the exhibit and affiliated programs in the event series.

Thanabotany: Cole Imperi Fellowship Lecture

Join Cole Imperi, this year's C.G. Lloyd Fellow, for an introduction to the concept of thanabotany, the intersection of ethnobotany (the relationship between plants and people) and thanatology (the study of death and dying). Pioneered at the Lloyd Library, thanabotany involves burial objects, historical medical texts and the symbolism depicted in ancient art. Free and open to the public. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Registration required.

New on the Shelf: Pharma-Ecology

One of the newest additions to the Lloyd's collection is the updated edition of Pharma-Ecology, which examines the effects of pharmaceutical and personal care products on the environment. With its multi-disciplinary approach, this work will be of interest to readers looking to keep up on the intersection of medicine, public health, and ecology.
