

Lloyd Library & Museum News

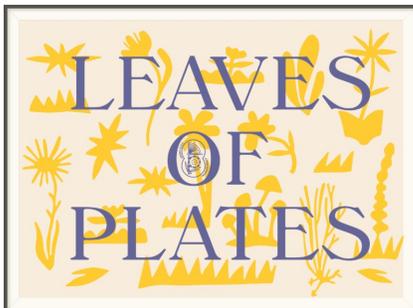

By now, most schools are back in session. Lloyd Library activities are ramping up as well. Both enrolled students and lifelong learners can find something to engage with as part of our fall schedule. Our new exhibition brings lectures, workshops and more. Watch for announcements of upcoming events planned throughout the rest of the year.

New Exhibit Featured in CityBeat

Check out a feature article on the new Leaves of Plates exhibit in this week's issue of CityBeat. Morgan Zumbiel visited the Lloyd and spoke with Future Retrieval, the artistic duo behind the exhibit's multimedia installation. Follow along and find out how they connected with the Lloyd's collections and sparked their own creative process.

Radio Interview on Lloyd's New Exhibit

Lee Hay, host of Around Cincinnati on WVXU, explores the Lloyd's newest exhibition in a conversation with our Executive Director, Patricia Van Skaik. Listen in as they talk about this immersive exhibit and its affiliated programs.

American Indian Agriculture Lecture Next Thursday

When: Thursday, September 19, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library & Museum

Lloyd Fellow M. Kat Anderson contributed to last month's New Yorker article on California's wildfires. Join Kat next Thursday for a lecture on American Indian contributions to our modern foodways and why we can't think of "wild" nature as separate from people. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Reservations required.

Artists-in-Residence Talk Leaves of Plates September 26

When: Thursday, September 26, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library & Museum

Katie Parker and Guy Michael Davis, as Future Retrieval, are Lloyd Library & Museum's inaugural artists-in-residence. They discuss their research into Lloyd collections, how that influenced their work in the studio and the creation of the Leaves of Plates exhibition. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Reservations required.
