

Lloyd Library & Museum News

The Lloyd Library, known for scientific research, is a place that also inspires creativity. In the next few weeks, writing and painting workshops build on our collections. Even in the research realm, creativity comes into play. As we select 2020 Fellows and Artists-in-Residence, we'll look for those projects that provide a fresh, unique and original approach.

Leaves of Paint Watercolor Workshop

When: Saturday, October 19,
1-3 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library &
Museum

Take home your own botanical art! Participants will get to select one of several botanical illustrations to paint with watercolors. Painters of any skill level are welcome. Instructors will be available with tips and techniques. All supplies will be provided.

Registration is required; $45, Members of the Lloyd Library receive $5 off with discount code.

Leaves of Plates Go Outside

Nature enthusiasts love the Lloyd. Radio and podcast host Carol Mundy invited Executive Director Patricia Van Skaik to join her on Outdoor Life. Listen to a naturalist's take on our contemporary art exhibit, Leaves of Plates, in this podcast episode.

Fellowship and Artist-in-Residence Deadline Closing Soon

The deadline is fast approaching to apply for the Curtis Gates Lloyd Fellowships and Artist-in-Residence. Do you have a great project in mind using Lloyd Library resources? Awards provide funds for research at the Library for one to three months. Fellowships and residencies involve on-site work with our collections and a final project upon completion.
