

Lloyd Library & Museum News

With all the hardships this year has brought, the Lloyd finds moments of gratitude. We are grateful that our founders had the foresight to establish a sustainable library that put a premium on health. We are grateful for our collections, our employees, and our Board, all of whom have enabled us to stay true to our mission. We are grateful for our donors and members, who provide countless support. And, we are thankful for all of you, who make it worthwhile.

Sentimental Science with Shae Warnick

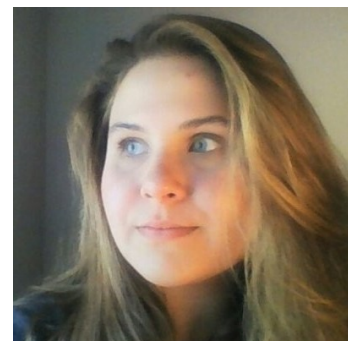

When: December 10, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Virtual Lecture

Join 2020 Lloyd Artist-in-Residence Shae Warnick as she discusses her project, Sentimental Science. Shae's on-site research at the Lloyd incorporated historic ornithology books and early travel and natural history texts for children. For her finished project, Shae created basic toy forms reflecting scientific objectivity, sentiment, fiction and folklore. Click here to register.

Lloyd Welcomes New Archivist

The Lloyd welcomes Archivist and Records Manager Christine Jankowski. Hailing from Wisconsin, Christine holds a BA in History from Cardinal Stritch University and a MA in Public History from Northern Kentucky University. She has previously worked with us on her capstone project, The Norman R. Farnsworth Collection, and processing numerous series including those from the World Health Organization. With digitization and photo preservation experience, she is looking forward to making our materials more accessible, assisting with research, and sharing her interesting finds. Welcome Christine!

All in the Family with the Sowerbys

With the plant-focused collections at the Lloyd, it's easy to overlook our small collection of books on shells and mollusks, including an 1842 edition of George Brettingham Sowerby's A Conchological Manual (pictured left). The Sowerbys were a family of natural history illustrators, with George being the son of James Sowerby, author and illustrator of English Botany. The Lloyd has books in which 8 different members of the Sowerby family were involved, either as illustrators, authors, printers, or booksellers.
