

LLOYD

LIBRARY & MUSEUM

With the snow melting and the weather getting warmer, we are excited for the change of season! March into spring with our continued celebration of Women's History Month. This week, the next release of the Dear Elizabeth podcast is ready for your listening pleasure. Our exhibit Women and Nature re-opens for visitors. Read on to find out how to put some spring in your step and learn something new.

Women and Nature* Exhibition Re-opens to Visitors

These folks traveled from Yellow Springs, OH and were the first to visit the re-opened Women and Nature exhibition. This fully vaccinated group coincidentally made the Lloyd their first stop at an indoor venue in almost a year. Schedule a time to view our exhibition or conduct research here.

Historic Lloyd Photos Digitized

Moving forward with our mission to digitize collections, the Lloyd identified glass plate negatives used prior to the advent of film cameras. These photographs, taken by our co-founder Curtis Gates Lloyd during a visit to Central America over 100 years ago, capture Mexican agrarian life in crisp detail. Special thanks to the Cincinnati and Hamilton County Public Library for scanning and digital restoration. You can learn more about Mexican agriculture and Curtis' photography in the upcoming issue of Lloydiana, available at all levels of membership.

Natural Wonders: Pioneering Female Scientists of Cincinnati Fellowship Lecture

When: March 18, 7-8 pm.

What: Virtual Lecture

Join 2020 Curtis Gates Lloyd Fellow Elissa Yancey for an exploration of her research into the groundbreaking travels and writings of Cincinnatians Lucy and Annette Braun, including correspondence with botanist Elizabeth Brockschlager. As natural scientists, the Brauns' early-20th century work holds modern implications for topics like climate change.
