

Eclectic Medical College Records, 1845-1942
Collection No. 3

Abstract

The collection consists of the minutes, financial records, matriculation and student records, student files and accreditation files of the college. Also includes the records maintained by the E.M.C. Library including lists of books in the holdings; vertical files on eclectics, homeopaths, colleges; photographs of eclectics; scrapbooks on the college; and theses presented to fulfill the requirements for graduation, 1846-1852. Also contains the minutes of the Alumnae Association of the college, papers of Byron H. Nellans, and records of the Eclectic Institute Publishing Co.

Historical Sketch

The Eclectic Medical Institute received its charter from the state of Ohio in 1845. It arose out of the ashes of the Medical Department of Worthington College. After the closing of Worthington, Thomas Vaughn Morrow, Dean at Worthington, removed to Cincinnati where he proceeded to reconstitute the school as the Reformed Medical School of Cincinnati, using several professors and graduates of Worthington. Upon receiving the charter under the name Eclectic Medical Institute, the College began a period of growth, though not without inter-faculty disputes which mirrored the larger questions of the different schools of medicine. The College became, by the last quarter of the century, to be the leading eclectic college in the country. The College enjoyed faculty such as John and Milton Scudder, John King, John Uri Lloyd, Andrew Jackson Howe and Frederick John Locke.

During the 1920s and 1930s, pressures on the Eclectic Medical College (as it was renamed in 1910) included the A.M.A.'s efforts to establish uniform requirements for medical colleges, a surge in popularity of allopathic medicine due in large measure to the discovery of penicillin and other antibiotics, and a general lack of research and progress in the overall field of eclectic medicine. The College faced lower applications and accreditation problems throughout the decades of the 1920s and 1930s. There were no graduations from 1929 to 1933. In 1933 the College reorganized, graduated students until the final matriculating class graduated in 1939. The College surrendered its charter in 1942, and dismantled, donating the remaining assets to two local hospitals, a sum of only six thousand dollars.

For the most complete and indepth examination of the Eclectic Medical College and the history of eclecticism see: Haller, John.

Scope and Content

The collection documents the Eclectic Medical College from its beginnings arising out of Worthington College, its successes through the remainder of the 19th century, and its ultimate demise in the early 20th century. The minutes of the board of directors span the years 1856 to 1942, including the dismantling of the college. Financial records primarily cover the years 1930 to 1942. Student accounts, 1853 to 1939 are contained in the matriculation records, which also provide information on home addresses, fields of study, mentors, and miscellaneous remarks.

The student files are in two groupings, 1910-1929, and 1933-1939. These contain application materials, yearly progress summaries and grades, and miscellaneous remarks.

The accreditation records encompass the 1930-1942 period, when the College's standing was in flux, and includes materials relating to the A.M.A.'s agreement vis-a-vis the College to grant acceptable status to the graduates with the surrender of the College's charter.

The Eclectic Medical College's Library files include lists of the holdings of the library, scrapbooks, and vertical files that were maintained on eclectics, homeopaths, and other medical colleges. Included in the eclectic files are the materials [primarily data sheets and port. photos] gathered by H. W. Felter for his work on the history of the College, which he turned over to the Library. Also included are the theses presented to the College from 1846 to 1852 to meet graduation requirements. The Library also maintained a photo collection on faculty and students, with class photos and yearly faculty photos included.

The minutes of the Alumnae Association of the Eclectic Medical Institute, 1902 through 1942, and miscellaneous programs are also included. The papers of Byron H. Nellans are included, with the records of the Eclectic Publishing Company which Nellans headed. The Publishing Company acted as an adjunct to the College, and was primarily engaged in the publishing of the Eclectic Medical Quarterly and books by Scudder, King, and other faculty and notable graduates. Included are articles of incorporation, financial records, correspondence and materials relating to the revoking of the articles.
