

LLOYD

LIBRARY & MUSEUM

It is officially summer! We're looking forward to warm weather and cooling off with our new exhibit Incredible Insects. Add the Lloyd to your summer to-do list with an in-person visit--no reservations required. Or learn more about creepy-crawlies in your garden with our upcoming virtual discussion and a new article in Edible Ohio Valley.

View Incredible Insects Exhibition without Reservations

What was the study of insects like in the past? Find out in the Lloyd's newest exhibition, Incredible Insects: 400 Years of Entomology. Illustrated works featured here date from 1634 (Thomas Moffett's Insectorum pictured) to the early 20th century, depicting habitat, anatomy and metamorphosis. Cicadas take center stage in The Cicada Room, with a photo exhibition by Dr. Gene Kritsky, and cicada-themed artist books from members of the Cincinnati Book Arts Society. Remember, reservations are no longer required to visit the Lloyd!

Friend or Foe: Bugs in your Sustainable Garden

When: July 15, 7-8 p.m.

Where: Virtual Panel Discussion

In the food garden, insects can be a plant's best friend or worst enemy. Join Domonique Peebles of Brick Gardens; Cedric Rose, gardener, writer, and librarian at the Mercantile Library; and Scott Beuerlein of the Cincinnati Zoo & Botanical Garden as they discuss strategies for attracting pollinators and protecting plants in their sustainable gardens. Registration required.

Lloyd Illustrations Featured in Edible Ohio Valley

Proving that classic illustrations never go out of style, Elizabeth Blackwell's Herbarium Blackwellianum images from 1750 (detail pictured) make the perfect accompaniment for a new article in Edible Ohio Valley. Ahead of his virtual appearance as mentioned above, Cedric Rose shares his pointers on making your garden and landscaping pollinator-friendly, using visual aids from the collections of the Lloyd Library.
