

What's new at the Lloyd? Quite a lot! We have a new strategic plan and have selected a design firm for a major renovation. We're continuing our focus on medical history with a new webinar and the return of our podcast. And if you're looking to beat the holiday rush, read on to find out about our gift shop sale! There's a lot to share this week at the Lloyd Library & Museum.

Lloyd Selects Design Firm to Re-Envision Building

Read the press release here.

Big news at the Lloyd--we have selected De Leon & Primmer Architecture Workshop to provide designs for a major renovation of our building. The world of libraries has changed significantly in the past 50 years since our current facility was built, as has our expanded outreach around critical topics of today. With this renovation, the Lloyd looks to improve its facility in a way that will enable the library to continue its tradition of scholarship and community engagement.

Contagious Cincinnati: Pandemics & Public Policy

When: Wednesday, November 17, 7-8 p.m. Where: Virtual lecture

We look forward to COVID-19 becoming a thing of the past--just like the 1918 influenza pandemic. Join Dr. Paul Tenkotte, Professor of History at Northern Kentucky University, as he explores the specter of pandemics lurking in the shadow of peoples' lives during the 19th and 20th centuries. Tenkotte connects the dots between contagion, research, and public policy in efforts to control some of the worst scourges of humankind. Registration required.

The Lloyd podcast Between the Leaves returns with a new episode. We're excited to introduce filmmaker and producer Meg Hanrahan as our new podcast host. Delving into the theme of medical history, Meg interviews Kevin Grace about 19th-century medical practices. For more on this topic, catch Kevin Grace's webinar on our YouTube channel.
