Our latest exhibit is just about ready for takeoff! Fly over to the Lloyd this month to view our featured feathered friends. Join us to learn about making your own space bird-friendly and take a gander at sustainable living for the future. We promise it will be a hoot!

On the Wing Exhibit Opening

When: Friday, March 11, 5-7 p.m
Where: Lloyd Library

The study of birds inspires discovery and furthers scientific understanding of biodiversity and ecology. On the Wing: An Illustrated Chapter on Birds brings the Lloyd’s ornithology collection to the forefront with a tribute to naturalists, artists, and bird lovers from all over the world and through time dating back to the 1600s. Complementing the book exhibit will be paintings of birds by sister-artists Alex and Shea Warnick. Proof of vaccination or negative test results required to attend reception.

Every Yard Counts: Making Your Backyard Bird-Friendly

When: Thursday, March 24, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Virtual Lecture

Despite global conservation efforts and successes, many bird species have continued to decline over the past century. Join Matthew Shumar, Program Coordinator of the Ohio Bird
Conservation Initiative, to learn how you can make your yard and home bird-friendly and support populations of migratory birds. Find more information and register here.

New Podcast Episode Out Now!

In the latest episode of our podcast Between the Leaves, host Meg Hanrahan talks to ornithologist, master bird bander, and upcoming Lloyd speaker Dave Russell about the challenges facing migratory birds and how bird banding can help. Learn about mist nets, nanotags, Motus towers, and more. Listen on Podbean or wherever you get your podcasts.

Learn About Sustainable Urban Landscapes

Birds and bees share the same ecosystem, where plants provide food and homes to both. With this in mind, sustainability on a local and global level is more crucial than ever. Our friends at the Cincinnati Zoo & Botanical Garden invite you to the Sustainable Urban Landscapes Symposium on March 10, featuring seven speakers on a variety of topics. Learn more and register here.
