

LLOYD
LIBRARY & MUSEUM

What do fungi, Impressionist paintings and the animals of Ohio have in common? They're all part of upcoming can't-miss events offered in conjunction with our Wild/LIFE exhibition! Join us as we take a deeper look into the mysteries of the fungal kingdom, how the natural world shaped the life of van Gogh, and the story behind multidisciplinary art created from our collections.

The Secret Lives of Fungi

When: Wednesday, July 20, 7-8 p.m.

Where: Virtual Lecture

This in-person lecture is sold out, but you can still attend it virtually! Fungi are weird, cool, and beautiful. But how much do we really know about them? For starters, they do much more than just spring up after a rain. They control much of life on our planet and are present everywhere. Britt A. Bunyard, mycologist and editor-in-chief of the journal Fungi, presents fascinating stories and beautiful photos of the amazing fungi featured in his latest book, The Lives of Fungi. Registration required.

The Nature of Van Gogh

When: Wednesday, August 3, 7-8 p.m.

Where: Lloyd Library

We all know his name, but what do we know about his life? Vincent van Gogh endeavored to tell his story through his work as a student then as a teacher, a minister and an artist. Join us at the Lloyd for this presentation by naturalist Carol Mundy, where we will look at how nature inspired the art of the renowned Impressionist painter. Registration required.

Meet Lindsay Wells

Meet Lindsay Wells--one of our 2022 Curtis Gates Lloyd Fellows who is currently writing a new chapter for her book on painting and gardening in 19th-century Britain. At the Lloyd, she is focusing on representations of tropical plants in books and journals of the period. In Wells' own words, "the Lloyd Library holds one of the most extensive and comprehensive collections of 19th-century horticultural texts that I've ever had the pleasure of viewing. The rare books and historical journals here offer a vivid snapshot of Victorian gardening practices, and they have already proved invaluable to my research on British art and horticulture."

Transformative Encounters

When: Thursday, August 11, 7-8 p.m.

Where: Virtual Lecture

We're excited to announce a virtual program with Audrey Bell, 2022 Lloyd Library Artist-in-Residence and medical illustrator based in Detroit. She will discuss her time at the Lloyd researching local fauna to inform her project Transformative Encounters, an exploration of interactions between species in Ohio, and the ways they have been documented through herbaria, botanical illustration, mapmaking and text. Topics include her research and creative process, and how Bell created the work in response to the Lloyd's collections. Registration required.
