

LLOYD
LIBRARY & MUSEUM

Seasons Greetings from the Lloyd Library!

From all of us at the Lloyd, we wish you and yours a happy, healthy and safe holiday season!

Sylvan Roots Now Open

The Lloyd's new exhibition, Sylvan Roots, celebrates trees with nearly 400 years of history on the page. Highlights include one of the earliest published work on trees of North America, The North American Sylva by François André Michaux, in which was found a letter from Thomas Jefferson. Travel back further in time with John Evelyn's Sylva (1664), the Latin term describing the trees of a particular place. Stop in to explore even more printed treasures featuring leaves, fruit and bark.

Walking Walnut Woods Outdoor Tour

When: Saturday, January 14, 10-11:30 a.m.

Where: Walnut Woods of Evanston

Corner of Victory Parkway and Sulsar Avenue

Join us on a guided hike of Walnut Woods of Evanston with naturalist Greg Torres. Cincinnati's newest park, it is a forest in recovery and a living laboratory for students working on the restoration efforts with community volunteers. Learn about the site history, how students and the community became galvanized to restore the site, the on-going conservation research, and future land management plans. No reservations required.

Mustard, Medicine and Health

With the holidays upon us, there's more to treats than cookies and peppermint. We have something special for the mustard lovers--our newest digital exhibit is now up! From condiment to medicine, the mustard plant and its products have a relationship with humankind going back millennia. Joined by historical illustrations from a variety of sources, this exhibit draws on the research of Lloyd Fellow Kevin Grace for an in-depth exploration of this fascinating plant.

Thanks for a Great Year!

Looking back on 2022, we'd like to take a moment and appreciate all the interest and support we received both near and far. We curated and welcomed visitors to exhibits on topics ranging from children's books to birds, as well as our first traveling exhibition. Our program schedule included experts on pollinators, wine and fungi, plus hands-on workshops and a field trip. Here's looking forward to more in 2023!

The Lloyd will be closed December 23-26 and January 2
