The Lloyd has received lots of visibility in the past month, having been featured on television, radio, in two local media publications and in a scholarly journal. We've also enjoyed the enthusiasm attendees brought to our last two events. We look forward to seeing more of you at this week's program!

Lloyd Renovation Featured in Local Media

Local12 and their partner Cincinnati Business Courier showcased the Lloyd's upcoming building renovation. Highlighting both the greater variety and numbers of Lloyd visitors in recent years, the articles addressed the need for adapted and expanded space, inside and out. In addition, the renovation will reflect sustainability as part of the overall design.

CityBeat Names Lloyd in Best of Cincinnati

It's official! In their 27th annual Best of Cincinnati issue, CityBeat magazine named the Lloyd "Best Place to See Botanical Prints" among the Staff Picks. Described as a "treasure trove," CityBeat praised not just our physical collections, but our Instagram page as part of the "downright cool" Lloyd experience.
Lloyd Fellow Elizabeth Yuko joined Carl J. Fichtenbaum, Vice Chair for Clinical Research for Internal Medicine at the University of Cincinnati, on WVXU's Cincinnati Edition. They discussed stopping the spread of infectious disease, past and present. Yuko's findings drew on her research at the Lloyd. Listen to the radio program here.

Lloyd Fellow Published in Literature Compass

2022 Lloyd Fellow Lindsay Wells' article "Tobacco for the Flower Garden" appeared in the March 16 issue of Literature Compass. Wells examines the collecting, marketing, and displaying of plantation crops as garden ornaments in 19th-century Britain. While at the Lloyd, she also used Victorian botanical journals and related works to write a chapter for her upcoming book Evergreen Empire: The Horticultural Politics of British Painting.
