

LLOYD

LIBRARY & MUSEUM

Spring is on the way and it's bringing exhibits with it! Catch the current Sylvan Roots and Threads of Light exhibitions, check out the upcoming mini-exhibit on ceramics, and mark your calendar for the newest exhibition The Mighty Deep, opening April 7. Rounding out March are two fascinating and informative programs, available only at the Lloyd.

Ceramics from the Collections of the Lloyd

Brought from Turkey to Cincinnati in the early 20th century, ceramic pieces from the Lloyd's historical collections will be on display alongside American apothecary jars and a work created by 2019 Lloyd Artists-in-Residence Future Retrieval. This mini-exhibition runs from March 13-24 in conjunction with CURRENT, the annual conference of the National Council on Education for the Ceramic Arts to be held in Cincinnati March 15-18. The Lloyd joins over 60 area venues in sharing ceramic exhibitions, and welcomes conference attendees and members of the public alike.

The Healing Power of Trees

When: Saturday, March 18, 1-2 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library

How can trees provide us with health benefits? Growing research shows regularly spending time around trees provides a wide range of human health benefits. Join Dr. Rama Kasturi as she explains why trees are the best healthcare not only for us but for a planet under siege from rising temperatures and climate change. Registration required.

A Force for Nature Movie Night

When: Friday, March 24, 7-8:30 p.m.

Where: Lloyd Library

It's movie night at the Lloyd! Join us for a viewing of A Force for Nature: Lucy Braun (2018). This one-hour documentary explores the life and legacies of E. Lucy Braun, one of the foremost botanists and ecologists in American history and a Cincinnati native who helped preserve natural spaces in Kentucky and Ohio. The film will be introduced by its director, writer, and producer Meg Hanrahan with a Q&A session afterwards. Registration required.

Don't Miss Sylvan Roots and Threads of Light

The Sylvan Roots and Threads of Life exhibitions run for just two more weeks. Don't miss your opportunity to see treasures like The North American Sylva by Francois Andre Michaux (pictured). Featuring both French and English editions, these early 19th-century books with hand-colored illustrations are some of the earliest books on American trees and are the foundational works in American forestry.

The Mighty Deep Opening Reception

When: Friday, April 7, 5-7 p.m.

Where: Lloyd Library

From the beginning of human history, people have had a vital connection with the sea. This spring and summer, the Lloyd's exhibition The Mighty Deep: An Exploration of Sea Life explores the most mysterious place on earth through books on the earth's oceans and seas. Magnificent illustrations of shells, fish, and crustaceans, complemented by equally beautiful images of aquatic flora, bring to life the natural history of coastlines, early oceanography, and pharmaceutical marine plants.

Refreshments. Free and open to the public.
