

LLOYD

LIBRARY & MUSEUM

The Lloyd's new program schedule kicks off in April! Whether it's our exhibition opening, a Fellowship lecture, or a program on the ecology of the Great Lakes, we've got something for everyone. Stay tuned for more program announcements as we head into spring.

The Mighty Deep Opening Reception

When: Friday, April 7, 5-7 p.m.

Where: Lloyd Library

From the beginning of history, people have had a vital connection with the sea. This spring and summer, the Lloyd's exhibition The Mighty Deep: An Exploration of Sea Life explores the most mysterious places on earth through books on the oceans and seas. Magnificent illustrations of shells, fish, and crustaceans, complemented by equally beautiful images of aquatic flora, bring to life the natural history of coastlines, early oceanography, and pharmaceutical marine plants. Refreshments. Free and open to the public.

Rest Rooms: The Sick Room in the American Home

When: Wednesday, April 12, 7-8 p.m.

Where: Lloyd Library

2023 Curtis Gates Lloyd Fellow Elizabeth Yuko is hard at work researching the connection between medical history and the home. Reserve your seat for her upcoming lecture with a unique focus on the history and evolution of the bedroom and sick room in American homes; and how elements of the room promote rest, sleep, and health for not only the occupant(s), but the rest of the household as well. Yuko will draw heavily from primary sources from the Lloyd's Eclectic Medical Collection as well as works discussing hygiene, sanitation, and domesticity from the late 1800s. Registration required.

Great Lakes Dredging in the Age of Ecology

When: Thursday, April 20, 7-8 p.m.

Where: Lloyd Library

In the 1960s, Ohioans grew increasingly concerned about their polluted environment, particularly as dredges hoisted polluted silt from beneath murky waters and dumped it into cleaner waters. Public pressure led to new laws limiting open water dumping, permanently reshaping the Great Lakes. David Stradling, author, professor, and Director of Environmental Studies at the University of Cincinnati, tells the story of how the lowly dredge has remade and continues to remake our world. Registration required.
