

Happy Independence Day! Though we're closed on July 4 to celebrate, there's lots to discover at the Lloyd Library when we re-open on July 5. Stop in to experience the final month of our exhibition The Mighty Deep. July 15 is Arctic Sea Ice Day, which we commemorate with a special program by Erin Curry focusing on polar bears and their connection to the loss of sea ice.

On Thin Ice: Polar Bears in a Changing Landscape

When: Saturday, July 15, 1-2 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library

Polar bears rely on sea ice for survival making them a flagship species for understanding the impact of climate change. Population monitoring is critical to determine how bears are responding to, and the impact of, their changing environment. Join Erin Curry, Director of the Polar Bear Signature Project at the Cincinnati Zoo & Botanical Garden, to learn more about how working with polar bears in zoos advances the conservation and management of their wild cousins. Registration required.

Last Month for The Mighty Deep!

Don't miss The Mighty Deep exhibition at the Lloyd--showcasing underwater life through multiple centuries of print. Along with fascinating and rare books, view larger-than-life reproductions of hand-colored illustrations depicting sea life by 18th-century British naturalist Mark Catesby from his work The Natural History of Carolina, Florida and the Bahama Islands. Stop in to view the exhibition before it closes July 28.

Research at the Lloyd in Publication

The Lloyd has a long tradition of supporting researchers both near and far. Earlier this year, the Lloyd assisted Lynn E. Niedermeier with her research article “‘The Board is Blue’: Kentucky Registers a Woman Pharmacist” for publication in The Register of The Kentucky Historical Society. Among the resources she used was an original 1891-92 announcement for the Louisville School of Pharmacy for Women. Have a research topic? Contact us for personalized assistance.
