

Summer programming is taking off at the Lloyd! Spots are quickly filling up for our next in-person program on Kenya's wildlife, and our walking tour of Brick Gardens is right around the corner. Plus, stay tuned or check our event calendar for an upcoming virtual program in late July!

When: Wednesday, June 25, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library

Discover the powerful link between community empowerment and wildlife conservation in Kenya with Mark Fisher, Vice President of Facilities, Planning, and Sustainability at the Cincinnati Zoo & Botanical Garden. Initiatives focusing on education, sustainable livelihoods, and community-led efforts help to protect Kenya's biodiversity while improving local well-being. Find out more on how empowered communities are key to long-term conservation success. Registration Required.

Brick by Brick: Growing Community and Food Security

Garden tour at Brick Gardens with Dominique Peebles

June 12
10-11 a.m.

Reservations are not required

When: Wednesday, July 12, 10-11 a.m.

Where: Brick Gardens, 1714 Cleane Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45212

Join us for a walking tour of Brick Gardens, an inspiring urban community garden dedicated to combating food insecurity in Cincinnati. Learn how this innovative project transforms vacant land and buildings into vibrant urban farms and indoor vertical farmhouses. With its mission to provide fresh, healthy produce to neighborhoods facing food deserts, see firsthand the positive impact this green space has on the local community.

Free and open to the public. No registration required.

Meet Kimberly Gwinn

The Lloyd is excited to welcome our first 2025 Curtis Gates Lloyd Fellow, Kimberly Gwinn, Professor of Entomology and Plant Pathology at the University of Tennessee, whose research will shape the curriculum for her course, Medicine and Drugs from Plants and Microbes. Diving into the Lloyd's collections, Gwinn will use sources as diverse as the Lloyd's Eclectic medical texts, early writings about cannabis, ergot and other spices, and botanical illustrations. Read more about her and our other 2025 Fellows and Artist-in-Residence here. Welcome, Kimberly!

Come visit--the Lloyd Library will be open
