10-11 a.m.

Reservations are not required

When: Saturday, July 12, 10-11 a.m.

Where: Brick Gardens, 1714 Cleneay Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45212

Join us for a walking tour of Brick Gardens, an inspiring urban community garden dedicated to combating food insecurity in Cincinnati. Learn how this innovative project transforms vacant land and buildings into vibrant urban farms and indoor vertical farmhouses. With its mission to provide fresh, healthy produce to neighborhoods at risk of becoming food deserts, see firsthand the positive impact this green space has on the local community. Free parking is available at the Cintas Center parking lot, adjacent to Cleneay Avenue, for this program.

Free and open to the public. No registration required.

Plants that Nourish and Heal South Africa's Legacy in the African Plant Diaspora

Presented by:
Dr. Shakira Shaik

— Saturday,
July 26th 1-2 P.M.

When: Saturday, July 26, 1-2 p.m.

Where: Virtual program

Shakira Shaik, plant biotechnologist and senior lecturer at the University of KwaZulu-Natal, explores the vital role of South African plants in food security and medicine, with a focus on undervalued crops and plants used by local communities in primary healthcare. Drawing from her extensive research, she will provide case studies and highlight the impact of South Africa's botanical heritage on global agricultural and medicinal practices.
