

Reaching more people with the incredible resources of the Lloyd has never been more important—or more exciting! From dynamic in-person and virtual programs to rare collections and groundbreaking exhibitions and partnerships, we're pushing boundaries and expanding impact.

Conservation in Action: Empowering Communities and Protecting Kenya's Wildlife

When: Wednesday, June 25, 7-8 p.m.

Where: Lloyd Library

Join Mark Fisher, Vice President of Facilities, Planning, and Sustainability at the Cincinnati Zoo & Botanical Garden, as he highlights the powerful link between community empowerment and wildlife conservation in Kenya. Initiatives focusing on education, sustainable livelihoods, and community-led efforts help to protect Kenya's biodiversity while improving local well-being. Discover more on how empowered communities are key to long-term conservation success. Registration Required.

Global Resources at the Lloyd

Our recent program, Botany and Botanists in Madagascar, underscores the impact of research and biodiversity in this African island nation. In addition, the Lloyd's collections also include a trove of hard-to-find and crucial scientific literature originating from Madagascar and other international locales. These materials (examples pictured) form a small part of a unique and rare collection donated to the Lloyd by a legend in the field of natural products research, Dr. Norman Farnsworth of the University of Illinois, Chicago.

While we greatly appreciate the enthusiastic response to our in-person programming, it also underscores the limited capacity of our program space, especially as our audience grows. Fortunately, offering the Lloyd's programs worldwide through a virtual platform has been a goal (and a success!) of our YouTube channel. Our videos have racked up over 28,000 views so far, and we regularly add new content, including three programs this year alone (Elizabeth Yuko pictured). Be sure to visit, subscribe, and get notifications of new content!

Help Support the Lloyd

With our Spring Fundraising Drive underway, now is the perfect time to help the Lloyd! The Elizabeth Wakeman Henderson Charitable Foundation has generously provided a matching grant for the first $7,500 in donations, so take advantage of this opportunity to maximize your donation. Your contribution in these times is crucial as we use our collections, exhibitions, and programming to bring science, art, and history to life!
