

We're not yet at the official start of summer, but things are heating up at the Lloyd! Our program schedule and exhibition, The Enduring Impact of the African Plant Diaspora, are underway and receiving great feedback. Also, consider supporting Lloyd activities through a donation.

A Tour of Africa is Sold Out

A Tour of Africa program has sold out, but stay tuned for upcoming programs on topics like wildlife conservation in Kenya and the work of community gardens in addressing food security in Cincinnati. Plus, plan a visit to see the accompanying exhibition, The Enduring Impact of the African Plant Diaspora.

Help Support Lloyd Programs

Programs are a hallmark of the Lloyd. Through them, we bring information not readily available elsewhere, sparking insight, awareness and creativity. Programming this critical and diverse requires financial support. Please join us by contributing to our spring fundraiser. The Elizabeth Wakeman Henderson Charitable Foundation has generously provided a matching grant for the first $7,500 in donations. Your contribution is crucial as we bring science, art and history to life.

New Documentary Series Features

Lloyd Collaborator

You won't want to miss Bugs That Rule the World, a new documentary series on PBS, starring entomologist and Lloyd collaborator Sylvana Ross of the Queen City Pollinator Project. Episode 2 features QCPP's Lick Run Greenway project in Cincinnati. Want more? Watch Sylvana Ross' tips for planning your pollinator garden on the Lloyd's YouTube channel.
