Climate, Culture, and Coffee

When: Wednesday, January 7, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library

Uncover the deeper meaning behind your favorite morning brew in Climate, Culture, and Coffee. Alejandra Flores, founder of Unataza Coffees in Dayton, Kentucky, delves into the origin of coffee and the varieties used for brewing. She takes a transparent look at the journey from farm to cup and the importance of ethical sourcing. Learn about challenges at coffee farms, including labor shortages and the impact of climate change along with Flores' mission to foster community and cultural exchange. Registration required.

Excitement over The Botany of Beverages

This past Friday, the Lloyd saw an amazing turnout for The Botany of Beverages exhibition opening reception. Our friends braved the cold for a first look at rare finds from our collection celebrating humanity's history through drink, from cola to cabernet. With the exhibit officially opened, it's a wonderful opportunity for bringing guests during the holiday season. Stop in for a serving of science and history by the glass!

Support the Lloyd with a Matching Grant

Support The Lloyd in its mission during this season of giving. Through December 31, your donation goes even further thanks to a generous $25,000 matching grant from an anonymous donor. We appreciate your support and can proudly say "Knowledge Grows Here."
