

The Lloyd Library & Museum is pleased to announce the launch of our striking new brand identity, rooted in our history and creative legacy within and beyond these walls with a vibrant aesthetic reflecting the energy and imagination that drives our work each day. We're also excited to reveal our spring exhibition More-Than-Human Medicine and its accompanying programs. The first lecture in the series brings author and professor Brad Bolman to The Lloyd to explore What Dogs Teach Us About Human Health.

More-Than-Human Medicine Opening Reception

When: Friday, May 8, 5-7 p.m.

Where: Lloyd Library & Museum

Join us as we celebrate the opening of More-Than-Human Medicine, an exhibition with health as a shared story between humans and the living world that sustains us. Through art, it honors the often-overlooked plants and animals whose quiet labor has shaped healing, survival, and care across centuries. The exhibition brings together botanical illustrations dating back to the eighteenth century with original work by 2025 Lloyd Artist-in-Residence Sara Torgison, weaving historical knowledge and contemporary practice into a single narrative. Refreshments. Free and open to the public.

What Dogs Teach Us About Human Health

When: Wednesday, May 13, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library & Museum

In the early 20th century, scientists around the world believed that many secrets of human health could only be revealed by careful study of dogs. Today, however, there is widespread criticism of the use of dogs in biomedical and chemical testing. Brad Bolman, author and Assistant Professor of History and Environmental Studies at Tulane University, explores the surprising history of dogs in international science, focusing on why lovable beagle dogs became one of the most significant animal models. Registration Required.
