

LLOYD
LIBRARY & MUSEUM

Our current exhibition, The Botany of Beverages, has been a hit since opening last month. The recent interview on Cincinnati Edition is a great way to not only reach a wider audience, but bring together our program partners in a fascinating, informative conversation. Cheers to great minds thinking alike!

Maple Sugaring Walk at the CNC

When: Sunday, February 8, 10:30 a.m.-12 p.m.
Where: Cincinnati Nature Center

Discover the sweeter side of winter with us at Cincinnati Nature Center! On this naturalist-led hike, we'll find native maple trees, check sap buckets, and look for signs of how native animals use sap. Learn what it takes to make maple syrup, including boiling sap, how to find sugar maple trees, and the history of maple sugaring. Registration required. $10 registration or free for Members.

THE NATURE OF SEX
The Sexy Side of Plants

WITH COREY CHRISTOPHER

When: Wednesday, February 11, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library

Join Cory Christopher, Director of Conservation at the Cincinnati Nature Center, to explore what we know about the way plants reproduce. Starting with an evolutionary perspective, Christopher traces the unusual adaptations that plants use to make more plants. From plants that imprison their pollinators to flowers that remember when a bee last paid them a visit, this program challenges the audience to rethink the distinctions between plants and animals, especially when it comes to sex. Registration required.

Herbarium Featured on WVXU

Check out the feature by WVXU on the Margaret H. Fulford Herbarium on the campus of the University of Cincinnati--a remarkable trove of specimens, and one with a connection to The Lloyd. You may have seen some of the Herbarium's dried plant specimens at past Lloyd exhibitions, and you may have also noticed that many of them were once part of Lloyd co-founder Curtis Gates Lloyd's 19th- and early-20th-century collections. The long collaboration between the Herbarium and The Lloyd continues to this day, with Herbarium curator and UC professor Eric Tepe also serving on The Lloyd's Board of Directors.

Cincinnati Edition Spotlights The Botany of Beverages

Get deep into the history, science, and culture of beverages as Lloyd librarian and curator Patrick Ford joins Christain Perry-Watt, founder of Kentucky Botanical Company and The Green Door, and Cory Christopher, Director of Conservation at the Cincinnati Nature Center, on WVXU's Cincinnati Edition. Both guests presented recent or upcoming programs at The Lloyd. Listen in on the conversation and join us for the upcoming program with Cory Christopher!
