

LLOYD

LIBRARY & MUSEUM

A book may seem to exist simply as an object, but it can link people and ideas around the world. Each book featured below creates global connections with the United States, showing how their information brings together cultures and nations, even across time periods. As a knowledge bridge, we at The Lloyd are excited to share these individual stories with you.

Book by Lloyd Fellow Recognized by BSHS

The British Society for the History of Science selected Lab Dog: What Global Science Owes American Beagles by 2023 Lloyd Fellow Brad Bolman to Highly Commend for its 2026 book awards. In its commendation, the BSHS praised Bolman's book as "compellingly written" in its exploration of "the entanglement of human and animal lives." Congratulations to Brad Bolman for this prestigious recognition!

Stunning Book on Japanese Fungi Now Digitized

Explore a new addition to The Lloyd's Digital Collections! Illustrations of Japanese Fungi by Seiichi Kawamura is now available through the Biodiversity Heritage Library. Through our digitization partnership with the Cincinnati & Hamilton County Public Library, we make exceptionally rare books from our collections available each year, expanding access to works that are often difficult to find in print or online. Kawamura was a botanist and mycologist from Japan who corresponded with Lloyd Library co-founder Curtis Gates Lloyd, and their letters are preserved in our archives.

Therapy Animals in Care and Community

with Pet Partners of Greater Cincinnati

August 5, 7-8 p.m.
Registration Required

When: Wednesday, August 5, 7-8 p.m.
Where: Lloyd Library & Museum

Marilyn Edwards of Pet Partners of Greater Cincinnati, an all-volunteer nonprofit organization, shares how trained therapy animal teams bring comfort, emotional support, and meaningful connection to people across the region. Combining scientific research with firsthand experiences, this program highlights the therapeutic power of human-animal relationships and the growing role of therapy animals in health and wellness. Chris Seelbach,

President and CEO of SPCA Cincinnati, will introduce Edwards and participate in a Q&A session following the program. Registration Required.
